TEAM NOTES

The Avalanche scored six or more goals for the third time in the 2020 Stanley Cup Playoffs. Colorado is averaging a league-best 3.82 goals per game.

With Nikita Zadorov’s second-period marker, the Avalanche has now had six goals scored by defensemen this postseason, which ranks third in the NHL behind Dallas (8) and Vegas (7).

The Avs finished with 71 hits, their most in any game (regular or postseason) since the stat began tracking in 2005-06. Their previous postseason high for hits in a postseason game was 46 on April 17, 2019 at Calgary. The 71 hits are the most by any team in a playoff contest that didn’t require overtime.

INDIVIDUAL NOTES

Nathan MacKinnon extended his point streak to 11 games, establishing a new franchise record for the longest such streak in the postseason. He surpasses Joe Sakic (10 games in 1996) and Marian Stastny (10 games in 1982). MacKinnon notched two assists and now has a league-best 20 points (7g/13a), the most points by an Avalanche player in a playoff year since Peter Forsberg in 2002 (27 points).

MacKinnon has produced multi-point efforts in five straight games (5g/8a), the first Avalanche player to record two or more points in five consecutive playoff outings since Peter Forsberg in 2002 (also five).

Gabriel Landeskog has registered at least a point in five consecutive contests, the longest playoff point streak of his career. He has totaled eight points (2g/6a) over that span. Landeskog also recorded 12 hits, the most by an Avalanche player in the playoffs since the stat began tracking in 2005-06.

Cale Makar recorded three assists and now has 11 points (2g/9a) in the 2020 Stanley Cup Playoffs, the most points by an Avalanche defenseman in a playoff year since 2002 (Greg De Vries, 13 points in 21 games; Rob Blake, 12 points in 20 games). He established a new franchise record for assists in a playoff game by a first-year defenseman and matched the franchise mark for most points in a postseason contest by a rookie blueliner (Jeff Brown, April 12, 1987 vs. Hartford, 1g/2a).

Makar’s three points is the most ever by an Avalanche rookie defenseman in a postseason contest, and he became the 21st rookie blueliner in NHL history with 3+ points in a playoff game.

Andre Burakovsky scored his fourth goal of the postseason, a new career high for the playoffs that eclipses his previous best of three goals set during the 2016-17 postseason.

With a goal and an assist tonight, Nikita Zadorov recorded his first career multi-point game in the playoffs.

Pierre-Edouard Bellemare scored his first career postseason goal.

Kevin Connauton registered his first career playoff point.
