TEAM NOTES
The Avalanche played the first game of its second back-to-back set of the 2020 postseason, the first time since the club moved to Denver that the Avs are playing multiple back-to-backs in a playoff year. Colorado split the first back-to-back set, winning Game 2 (3-2) and losing Game 3 (4-2) of its first-round series against the Arizona Coyotes.

Colorado’s 3.83 goals per game leads all teams in the 2020 Stanley Cup Playoffs.

INDIVIDUAL NOTES
Nathan MacKinnon extended his point streak to 12 games, the longest playoff point streak in franchise history and the longest of any player since 2010 when Chicago’s Jonathan Toews had a 13-game streak and Detroit’s Johan Franzen had a 12-game run.

MacKinnon is one of six players in NHL history to begin a postseason with a point streak of 12 or more games, joining Bryan Trottier (18 games in 1981), Mark Messier (14 games in 1988 and 13 games in 1994), Bobby Orr (14 games in 1970 and 13 games in 1972), Johan Franzen (12 games in 2010) and Denis Potvin (12 games in 1976).

MacKinnon has a league-high 21 points (7g/14a) this postseason and 50 career playoff points (18g/32a), tied for 11th in Avalanche/Nordiques franchise history (Chris Drury, Alex Tanguay).

Cale Makar finished with two points (1g/1a) for his second straight multi-point outing. He has six points (1g/5a) over a three-game point streak and his 13 points in the playoffs rank second among all defensemen and eighth among all skaters.

Makar is now tied for fifth in points by an Avalanche/Nordiques defenseman in a single playoff year.
